Remember, health insurance networks are one of the most important topics to research as you choose a plan. If keeping a preferred provider, facility or supplier is important to you, be sure to check out the insurance carrier's preview site (click on a carrier name below to access corresponding preview site) before you enroll. Even once you're enrolled, stay updated through the carrier's member site. Here are a couple of differences between the networks for national and regional insurance plans to keep in mind:

• National health insurers have contracted with providers, facilities and suppliers across the country to provide in-network and sometimes out-of-network health care services. In addition, as you use provider search tools, you may notice that certain national insurers offer a more select network (versus a broad network) in certain regions of the country. These select networks are designed to guide you to an alternate network of quality doctors and hospitals who are local and save money.

• Regional insurers (highlighted in orange below) have contracted with providers, facilities and suppliers in certain geographic areas to provide in-network and sometimes out-of-network health care services. Regional insurers offer a more limited, localized network, so always check if your preferred providers are in-network to save money.

Tips: Once you begin enrolling, it is highly recommended that you use the Help Me Choose tool to ensure your preferred providers and facilities are in-network. By using Help Me Choose on the APTIM Benefits Marketplace website, you will be presented with doctors and hospitals that are in-network with the health insurers and plan options available to you. However, if you frequently travel or have covered dependents who do not live at home with you, in-network care is generally limited to emergency and urgent care. It's best to contact the carrier directly to determine availability of in-network providers throughout the country and your options for urgent and emergent care. If you have questions about out-of-area coverage, be sure to contact the carrier to understand how care will be covered.
